Police officers in Southern California arrested two individuals after they attempted to sell a dog to its owners. The pooch was taken amid a theft in October 17. When the owners saw the pooch for sale on Craigslist for $2,500, they sought the San Bernardino County sheriff's help. The owners, disguised as interested buyers, arranged to meet with the suspects. The police officers arrested the suspects after the owners properly identified the dog. Possession of stolen property is only one of the charges that the suspects could face.
