Survey: Most Doctors Work Sick, Putting Patients at Risk

A Children's Hospital of Philadelphia survey found that most doctors work even while sick and expose patients to their illnesses. About 83 percent of the physicians and advanced practice clinicians surveyed said they worked while ill at least once during the past year. The respondents also admitted they worked when they had symptoms such as fever, diarrhea, and other flu-like symptoms. 98 percent indicated that they "didn't want to let their colleagues down".
